

Dreams in Motion

At times, the weight of what we need to do feels overwhelming, but within that, there's also space for the things we truly want. Dreams are the silent architects of our future—often guiding us even when we aren't fully aware. This poem captures that quiet process of envisioning a life that we haven't yet lived, but one we deeply hope for. It's a personal reflection on planning, dreaming, and the balance between ambition and uncertainty.

“A Sketch of Dreams”

(A self-made poem by Say)

Today, I set aside what I must do,
Drawn instead to something I love—
Sketching within four corners,
A house, a dream, a future home.

While sketching walls and floors,
I envisioned more than just my doors.
I imagined little feet running around,

